After Seven Years

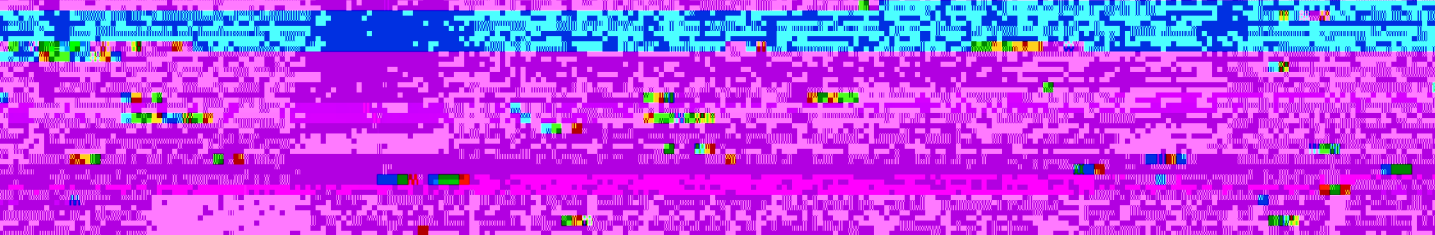

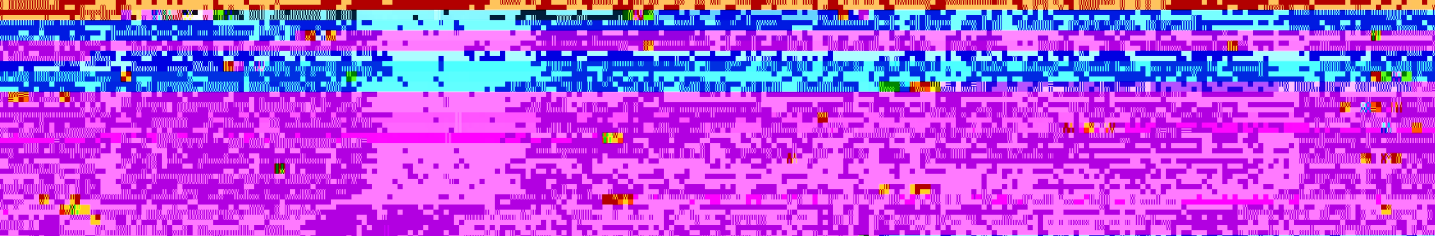

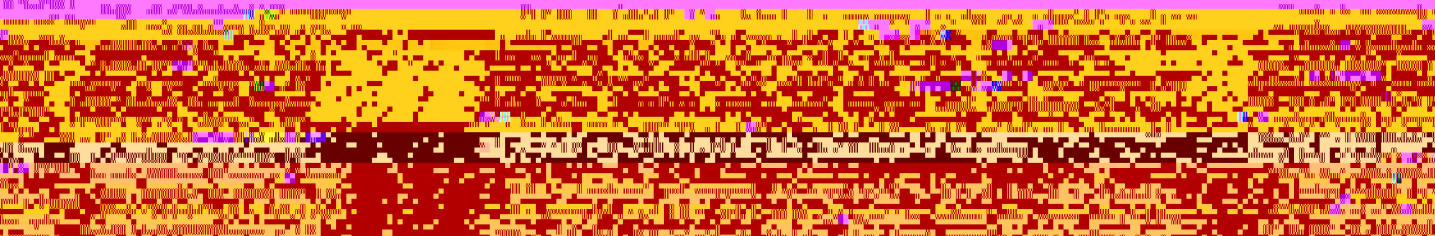

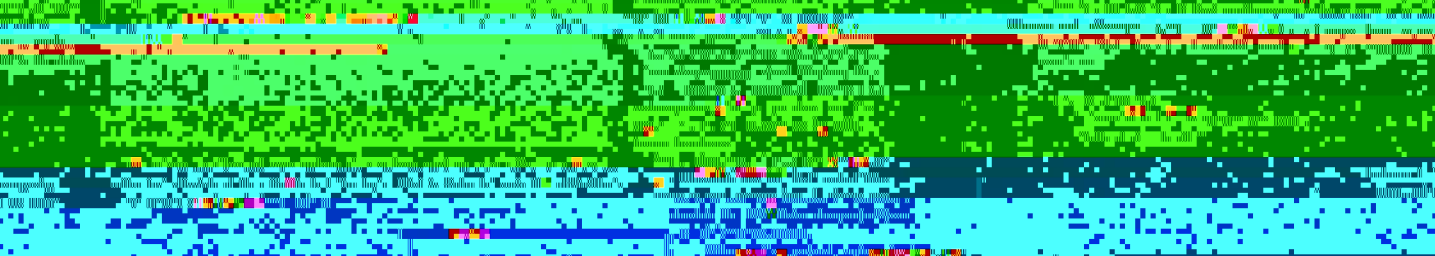

Mrs. Golding Dickman, instructor of English at Glenville State College, is retiring from her position after seven years. Mrs. Dickman says here is

100 Centennial Graduation

As Dean of Glenville State College, I have great pleasure in the Class of 1972. You are doubly honored in that you are a member of the first graduating group since the college's centennial, the first graduating group to be designated as the Centennial Class. As the College

The building shown in the photograph above is a prominent structure in the community, possibly a school or a government building. It features a large, multi-story facade with a central tower or entrance area. The image is somewhat faded and has a grainy texture, typical of newspaper print from that era.

The building is a large, multi-story structure with a prominent central tower or entrance area. It appears to be a school or a government building. The facade is light-colored, and there are many windows. The central tower is taller than the rest of the building and has a distinct architectural style. The building is surrounded by a lawn and some trees. The sky is clear and blue.

Local News

The local news section contains several short articles and reports. One article discusses a recent event at the community center, while another mentions a local business opening. The text is dense and difficult to read due to the high contrast and graininess of the scan.

Community

The community section features news about local organizations and events. There is a mention of a meeting held by a local group and a notice about an upcoming event. The text is somewhat blurry but appears to be a collection of local notices.

Obituaries

The obituary section contains several notices for recent deaths. Each notice includes the name of the deceased, their age, and a brief description of their life and family. The text is small and difficult to read.
